Do you know the difference between subsidence and settlement?

Too many people trust insurance settlement offers and accept them without realizing the facts: Initial offers are generally grossly low compared to the actual value of a claim. By accepting an offer, you give up your rights to any additional compensation stemming from that accident, even if you still need additional treatment.

Once the insurer has arrived at a settlement figure, he or she must decide what to offer. The first offer is going to be a percentage of what the insurer thinks is the final value of the case. For example, the insurer may require that the first offer be 40% of the value of the case. There is no industry-wide standard on this.
